Cradley station opened in 1863. The Birmingham bound platform was situated to the east of the level crossing, with the goods yard occupying the site of the current platform, bus interchange and car park. The station was later renamed to Cradley Heath & Cradley, but the name was simplified to Cradley in 1968. It later took its current name.

The down (Birmingham bound) platform was rebuilt on the west side of the level crossing and came into use in January 1984.

A new bus interchange facility opened at the station on 26 July 2015.
